

Outfit an Adventure Dog

Sharing epic trips with your pup requires training—and the right gear. Here's how to keep your pet pal safe and comfortable. by ADAM BIBLE

CAMPING

× NiteDog Rechargeable LED Dog Collar

Nite Ize

If Rex can't resist chasing critters into the woods, make sure he's easy to spot with this rechargeable LED collar—a button activates a bright glow for 6.5 hours. $25; niteize.com

× Highlands Sleeping Bag

Ruffwear

You may love your pooch, but you don't want to sleep with her. This synthetic-down bag opens into an oval mat during the day, zips closed at night, and packs into its own stuff sack. From $100; ruffwear.com

TRAIL RUNNING

× Hands-Free Dog Leash

Tuff Mutt

Cruising down gnarly trails gets dicey with wildlife and hikers distracting your dog, who might pull you off-balance. This hands-free 48-inch-long leash's bungee cord absorbs sudden tugs, keeping you upright. $25; tuffmutt.net

× K9 Backbowl

Mountainsmith

Most portable bowls are easy to carry but fussy and prone to tip. This foldable, 2.7-ounce, TPU-coated-nylon version tucks into a hydration vest or pocket yet is sturdy—snaps at the corners form a pan that holds 1.25 liters of water. $13; mountainsmith.com

× Surf N Turf Dog Life Jacket

Kurgo

Don't let doggy paddling fool you; not all breeds swim like a Lab. Before going onto the water, strap a flotation jacket on your dog. This versatile coat has two tethering points and big carrying handles so you can yank your pooch out of the drink. The foam layer is removable, making the shell usable as a raincoat. From $46; kurgo.com

× Lavasox Summer Boots

Saltsox

The noses of most paddleboards lack texture, so dogs who love to perch out there benefit from a better grip. These airy dog boots have a grippy rubber bottom that will keep your dog steady and double as protection against scorching summer pavement. $60; saltsox.com
