Just Like Your Pup, This Dog Gear is Ready for Adventure

ALEKSANDARNAKIC / GETTY IMAGES

Dogs make great adventure buddies. Depending on the breed, they're energetic, fun-loving, and don't complain nearly as much as your human companions might. When taking them outdoors, you can make do with an ordinary collar and leash, but building up your dog's gear kit will make their time in the field (and yours) safer and more comfortable. We researched the market, read customer reviews, and relied on our own four-legged friends' experience with some of these products while hiking, camping, and otherwise enjoying time outside. That's how we know this gear will hold up on all your excursions.

Keep an eye on your dog when it's dark out with the NiteHowl. It's available in five colors, and the two LED lights work in glow or flash modes. Our tester has been particularly impressed with the run time. Almost two years in, she hasn't had to replace the batteries yet.
